1. Vision on 'suitable education' (in Dutch: passend onderwijs)

Briefly describe the school's vision on suitable education. For more extensive information refer to the school plan, the school guide or the website.

The International Waldorf School is a small school for children from the international community in The Hague and its surroundings. The school population is very diverse, and because of this, the school strives to keep classes small so that it can meet each child at their own individual levels. Although we work with classes based on the graded system, the planning of the lessons is based on the individual needs of the child as much as possible.

Because the International Waldorf School is a young school, there is little staffing and financial capacity for extra educational support. The teachers offer differentiated education, and this demands substantial independence from the students.

2. Basic support (in Dutch: basisondersteuning) within Haaglanden

The text below is a fixed text for all schools within Haaglanden.

Basic support

Basic support is support that is offered in every school in Haaglanden. Schools receive an annual budget from the Regional Alliance SPPOH to be able to provide this. This budget is used to strengthen suitable education in school. For example, organizing a multidisciplinary consultation (in Dutch: multidisciplinair overleg, or MDO) or offering preventative or mild curative interventions.

The basic support of our schools consists of:

- A. Basic quality
- B. The support structure at school
- C. Working according to the Action-Based Approach (in Dutch: Handelingsgericht Werken, or HGW)
- D. Preventative and mild curative interventions

A. Basic quality

The minimum standard of basic support that a school offers, is equivalent to that of the criteria of basic quality as set by the Dutch Inspectorate of Education.

B. The Support Structure at school

The Support Structure at school is the system with which the school evaluates their education and tracks the development of the individual pupils (also sometimes called the Care Structure). Part of this is having a dedicated team that coordinates and stimulates the execution of the basic support and extra support. In order to achieve this, this team will collaborate with the pupils, the teacher(s), the SPPOH advisor, the school social workers and other professionals. What type of professional/expertise involved in the support structure of the school and how this is visible to teachers, parents and pupils is described in the school plan.

This is how the support structure in our school is coordinated:

Level	Description	Where?	Who?	What?
1	Basic Support Parents are informed about the development of their child during progress meetings.	In Class	- Teacher - Parents	Education in class Action-oriented Using a tracking system
2	Basic Support Parents are informed about the development of their child during progress meetings.	Extra support in class	- Teacher - Support Coordinator (in Dutch: intern begeleider or IB'er) - Parents	Action-oriented. Teacher can request help and advice from the Support Coordinator.
3	Basic Support / Preventive Support Parents are asked to give permission for extra teacher support - inside or outside of school hours. The responsibility of the request for help depends on who makes the request (parents / school).	In and out of school	- Teacher - Parents - Support Coordinator - External experts	Support at school and advisory role of external experts. Internal: using the school support structure: support coordinator, educational assistance (if available). External: e.g. specialist therapies, psychological or academic assessment, behaviour management expertise, specialist tutoring.
4a	Preventive Support / Basic Support with IEP Consultation and cooperation with parents and external specialists. Multidisciplinary Consultation (in Dutch: Multidisciplinair Overleg or MDO)	In and out of school	- Teacher - Parents - Support Coordinator - Principal - School Social Worker - Community Mental Health team - SPPOH	Support at school with internal and external specialists. The support coordinator formulates the request for help and expectations in an Individual Educational Plan (IEP) (in Dutch: Ontwikkelingsperspectiefplan or OPP) to request additional (external) support.

4b	Transferring to another educational institution.		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Support Coordinator - Parents - Principal - SPPOH - Other Primary School or Special School 	The support coordinator coordinates the process around the referral to a different educational institution.

C. Action-Based Approach (in Dutch: Handelingsgericht werken or HGW)

In Haaglanden it is agreed that the Action-Based Approach is used to monitor the educational development of the children. By this we mean that the school will work from the overview (the information we already have access to) and insight (justifying factors) towards outcome (an appropriate educational proposal) for a pupil. The development of the pupil is reviewed structurally and if necessary, the goals or the Individual Education Plan will be adjusted. Schools will be goal oriented and continually think about the possibilities.

Action-Based Approach principle	Achieved	Developing	Still to be addressed
We work according to the Action-Based Approach within our school.		x
1. Goal-oriented education.		x
2. Procedures are systematic, step-by-step and transparent.		x
3. Educational needs are central.		x
4. There is interaction and alignment of ideas between the child, the parents (and parenting) and the education.		x
5. Parents and teachers are seen as peer counsellors.	x
6. Positive aspects matter.	x
7. Constructive collaboration.	x

D. Preventative and curative interventions

Every school can apply a number of preventative and mild curative interventions within the basic support to meet the educational and/or support needs of a pupil. The school carries out those interventions within their own support structure, direction and under their own responsibility.

3. Extra support

For pupils who need more support than can be provided within the basic support, our school can apply for extra support. This could be a package (extra financial budget) from the regional alliance SPPOH, an intervention through Youth Care or a transfer to a school for children with special needs. The extra support is discussed in a multidisciplinary consultation (MDO), in collaboration with the parents and if possible, also with the pupil. The advisor for suitable education from the regional alliance SPPOH is always involved in coordinating the extra support. You can find more information on the regional alliance SPPOH at www.sppoh.nl. The support coordinator is the point of contact for parents, teachers and pupils in coordinating extra support.

The International Waldorf School is internationally oriented and has contact with numerous external professionals who also offer international insight when needed. The funding for these services comes generally from parents or from the SPPOH budget. Due to the fact that the majority of the student population is a transient one and that they stay in the Netherlands for a relatively short period of time, it is at times challenging to arrange the optimal type of support at a given point in time.

4. Duty of Care

The text below is a fixed text that is part of the Educational Support Profile (SOP). This way, all SOPs of schools in Haaglanden have the same description of the agreements on Duty of Care. These agreements are based on the law and specifications for Haaglanden are made where necessary.

Since the introduction of 'suitable education' (in Dutch: Passend Onderwijs) in 2014, all school boards have a duty of care. This means that they are responsible for investigating the possibilities when offering suitable education to a pupil with extra educational and support needs. Extra support from the SPPOH can be used for this. Sometimes it is not clear at the time of enrolment if there are additional needs, and if so, which educational and support needs must be catered for. In this case, school can use up to six weeks after the written date of enrolment by parents/caregivers to carry out this investigation and see if the school can provide suitable education. The period of six weeks can be extended once by four weeks, and if done, must be communicated to parents. If the school cannot offer the necessary support, they will look for a suitable placement at another school in conjunction with the parents. The regional alliance SPPOH can support the school with this process, however the school board and direction remain ultimately responsible.

Duty of care also means that a school can only unenroll the pupil once another school has been found to admit that pupil. This is to prevent a pupil falling through the cracks. A school may refuse a pupil if the school is full, but only in the case that the school has a consistent and transparent admissions procedure. When parents do not respect the fundamental concept of the school, these are also valid grounds to refuse the pupil. The admissions procedure of schools must also not only be understandable to parents, but also to other schools in the area. In the case that all the primary schools in a given area are full, schools will actively seek cooperation with each other to find a solution together. 'Education nearest to home' is the starting point. If it appears that schools/school boards are not addressing their duty of care satisfactorily, the directors of schools can hold each other accountable. As a last resort, the director of the regional alliance SPPOH can arrange a meeting with the school boards and eventually propose to the board of the SPPOH that it should put measures in place. If pupils change school mid-term, schools will always contact each other before confirming placement of the pupil. This is not only in cases where duty of care applies, but also in cases of transfers (i.e. primary to primary; special education to primary; in the case of parents dissatisfaction; etc).

5. Basic support budget

Every school receives a budget to strengthen the basic support, including interventions. This budget is determined and granted per school year. It consists of a fixed amount per independent school location and an amount per pupil.

The basic support budget for this school year 2023-2024 has been allocated to:

- English as an Additional Language – 10 hours in order to be able to teach students in English
- 12 hours for support coordination (establishing the support structure needed and coaching staff and students)
- Teaching assistant kindergarten.

Specifically: €106 per pupil.

6. Development / evaluation

The school will set new targets for suitable education in the yearly plan. The SOP will be evaluated through the Plan-Do-Check-Act (PDCA) cycle of the school on 31 May 2024.
